Winner of Yokel-Miller Bout Has Fine Chance at World Title

Wrestler Who Is To Tackle Yokel

THE confusion of classes and championships which has characterized both the wrestling and boxing games for some time past is being straightened out as far as the middleweight wrestling class is concerned. Harry Heagan, the veteran promoter, is determined that a real champion must be crowned and he has set about to accomplish this task.

Fred Beel was recognized as the middleweight champion for many years and there was not a man in the game who had the slightest chance of defeating him. But Beel grew old and took on weight until he tipped the scales as high as 175 pounds. Then Henry Gehring of Cleveland stepped in and claimed the middleweight title, just like Abe Attell claimed the featherweight boxing title when Terry McGovern outgrew the class. Like Attell, Gehring has always defended his crown and no man has ever been able to defeat him. Walter Willoughby had an excellent chance until Gehring made him do 155 pounds at matside, and then Willoughby was so weak that he had no chance.

WALTER MILLER.

Since then Gehring has defended his title successfully. There have been but two real contenders—Walter Miller of St. Paul and Mike Yokel of Salt Lake. Gehring came out here and wrestled Yokel at the Salt Lake theater over a year ago. The fans remember how the referee allowed the men to walk off the mat and call the bout a draw after three hours and thirty-eight minutes of wrestling, in spite of the fact that the men had agreed to wrestle to a finish, best two in three falls.

Wrestling experts all agree now that Yokel was the stronger of the two at the finish and had an excellent chance to win.

Then Gehring went back east and wrestled Miller at St. Paul. The officials there, too, seemed to be asleep, because time was called before Miller could get his sweater off. Gehring grabbed him while he had his sweater over his head and secured a fall in less than three minutes of wrestling. They went at it again, Gehring could do nothing with Miller and the police stopped the bout at the end of three hours because the men were fighting like a couple of tigers.

A short time later Mike Yokel made his famous invasion of the east. He met Gehring in a bout at Cleveland which was limited to three hours. Mike thought that he could remain on the defensive for the first half of the contest and let Gehring tire himself out and then win. But Mike was fooled, for at the end of the one and one-half hours Gehring was strong and Mike lost the decision on a technicality. The referee called it a draw, being able to get a fall.

Then Mike went to St. Paul and tackled Miller. This bout was limited to two and one-half hours. As Mike expressed it, "Miller was so fast that it was an hour before I could see him." Twenty minutes before the time limit was reached Yokel threw Miller out of the ring. The St. Paul man was so badly stunned that Yokel was able to get behind him for the first time, but he could not overcome the big lead in points which Miller had piled up, and Miller was declared the winner.

Now Yokel and Miller are going to meet in a finish bout, best two in three falls, at the Saltair hippodrome on Monday, May 27. There will have to be a winner and a loser in this bout as Heagan will not stand for any draws. The winner will be matched with Gehring for a finish bout here about July 1, and then the question as to which of the three is the best man will be settled for some time to come.

Miller leaves St. Paul for Salt Lake today, and will arrive here about Wednesday. Yokel will arrive at the same time from his ranch in the Jackson Hole country, where he has been doing his preliminary training. Yokel is in better condition at the present time than he has ever been in his entire life. He is going to change his style and assume the aggressive against Miller. Mike is confident that if he can beat Miller inside of two hours, he can also defeat Gehring and win the championship.

Heagan is making preparations to handle a record crowd at the contest. Special cars will be set aside for the women who will journey to the lake to see the contest, and a special section

WOLGAST IS NOT THE BOY HE USED TO BE

Champion Fails to Show His Former Class in 4-Round Bout With Ritchie.

By W. W. Naughton

By International News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—While boxing four rounds with Willie Ritchie at the Eighth street arena today, Champion Ad Wolgast scored two knockdowns. It was well that he did so, for had it not been for his success in the direction indicated, the crowd would have felt like giving Ritchie the credit of a victory over the prince of 135 pounders. This because Ritchie outboxed Wolgast in each of the other three rounds and sent him staggering repeatedly with hard lefts and rights.

Jack Welch presided over the bout and performed all the offices commonly allotted to a referee, with the exception of rendering a decision. He was prevented from making a ruling through an agreement entered into between the boxers beforehand. It may be that Welch would have attached more weight to the two knockdowns than to all the prodding and cuffs Wolgast received from Ritchie. A knockdown blow, of course, wipes out all the indignities previously thrust upon a fighter by a pestering opponent, and as a knockdown blow is the nearest thing to a knockout, it stands to reason that a referee would take more heed than of a number of blows which did not carry knockdown force.

On this basis of reasoning, it is possible that if a decision had been given today it would have been in favor of Wolgast. If, however, there had been a decision, and it had been a draw, a writer believes it would have found favor with the majority of the spectators.

To judge from Wolgast's showing today, he is not the fighter he was before the operation for appendicitis. If his contest with Nat Sanders, Joe Rivers, were scheduled for a week or two from now, the chances are that Rivers would be an even money choice, if not indeed a favorite.

But nearly two months will intervene before Wolgast and Rivers get together, and if the champion is well advised in the meantime he will cut out all his short bout engagements and devote his whole attention to preparing for the Fourth of July affair at Los Angeles. It is as sure as the sun shines that if Wolgast is in no better shape in July than he was today there will be a new lightweight champion to rave over.

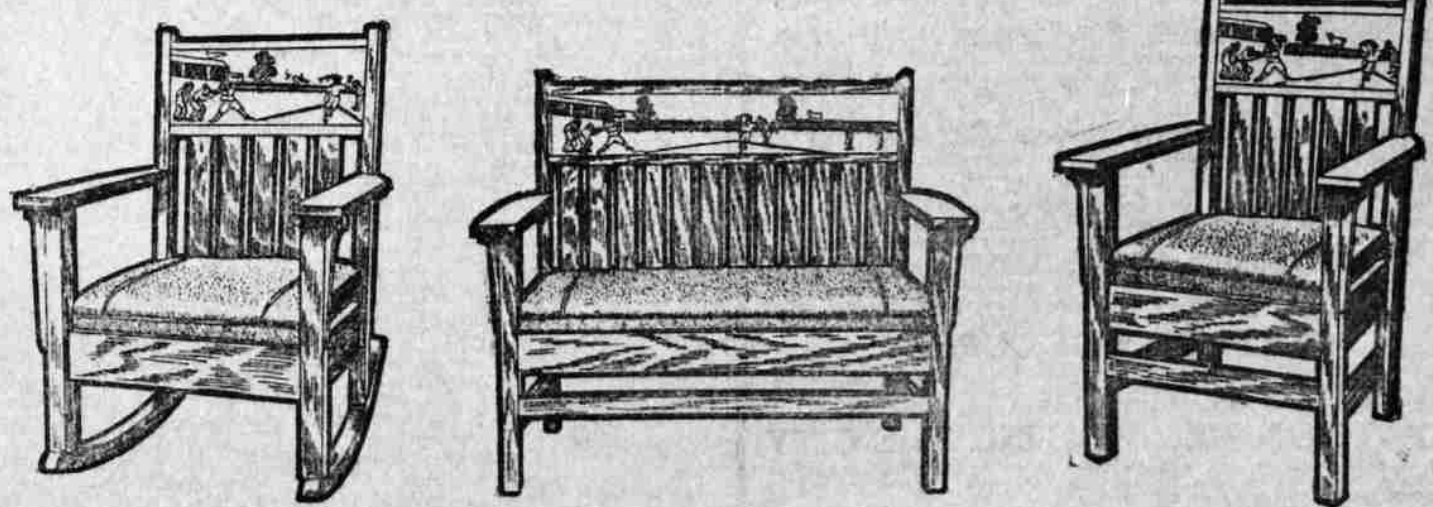

One of the most noticeable things about Wolgast's boxing today was the frequency with which he missed. Not one of every four blows at Novice Ritchie reached the mark. Ritchie, on the contrary, lashed out with wonderful precision, and if it had not been for the local lad's nervousness Wolgast would have fared far worse than he did.

The chance of the occasion overwhelmed Ritchie. He was in a flustered condition, but not fear, for he is a game lad. The idea of hooking up with a world's champion and the possibilities that lay in the meeting were what unnerved Master Ritchie. The newspaper decision gave Wolgast a shade.
